BEFORE YOU GO

You pay at individual sights

Slovenia's nature conservation act allows a charge for visiting individual natural monuments and for parking there, for example where ...

Four per cent of Slovenia

The park covers 83,982 hectares, about 840 km² (324 sq mi), and almost entirely matches the Eastern Julian Alps.

When the car park is full, the barrier stays closed

The car parks at the head of the Vrata Valley fill up quickly. When they are full, the barrier at the valley entrance does not open.

The main season is short

In 2026 the free buses into the Vrata Valley run from 1 June to 15 September, plus an electric bus to Peričnik in summer.

No swimming in mountain lakes and streams

Swimming in high-mountain lakes and streams is prohibited, for dogs as well. The park authority cites the sensitivity of these habitats.

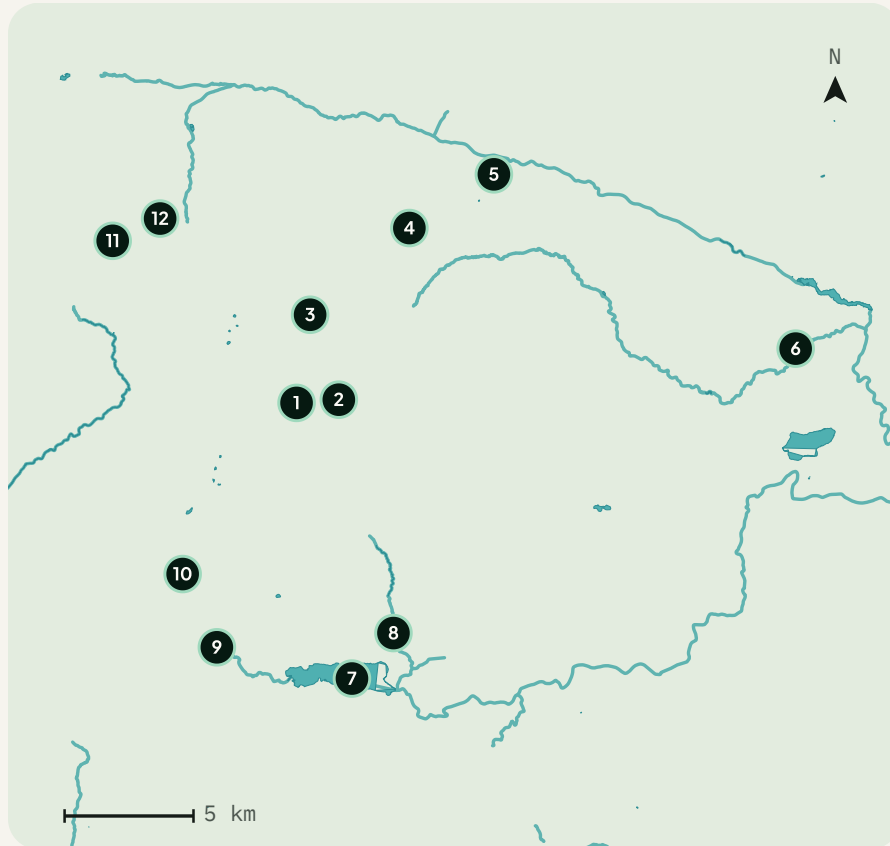

Dogs on a lead

Dogs must always be kept on a lead in the park's natural areas, not least because of grazing livestock on the alpine pastures.

TRIGLAV

LAKE BOHINJ

SAVICA WATERFALL

THINGS TO DO

Do not underestimate Triglav

The Julian Alps are demanding, the park authority warns explicitly.

Walk behind the waterfall

At Peričnik in the Vrata Valley, the water falls freely for 52 m (171 ft) over a conglomerate wall.

Boating and diving on Lake Bohinj

Boating is allowed on Lake Bohinj all year without a permit, and so is diving.

About 7,000 species

Around 7,000 species live in the park.
